

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An information providing system includes a client that obtains user information and sends the information to a server; and the server that manages the user information sent from the client for each user and, based on the user information, selects information to be sent to the client. The client performs a pseudo conversation with a user to obtain a user's taste as the user information.